Mike & Susan Boyett #10735

Mike and Susan are both from Louisiana and met at Louisiana Tech University. They married in 1983 and have five grown children.

In the Ugandan church, discipleship has not kept pace with evangelism. Church planting has outpaced pastoral training. Young and insufficiently trained pastors serve these rapidly sprouting churches. This has resulted in congregations that are often confused about the gospel and ill-equipped to understand and apply the Scriptures adequately.

After several years of teaching at various theological schools in Uganda, it became evident that the most effective method for training pastors is a hands-on, apprenticeship-type training that focuses on cultivating character and competence in the skills essential for shepherding God's people and bringing them to maturity. While Mike is primarily focused on training church leaders, Susan spends much of her time discipling young university women.

In addition to a rapidly growing church, Uganda is experiencing a rapidly changing society. To help emerging leaders understand the local impact of today's globalizing world and to promote a thoughtful consideration of a Christian understanding of life and culture, the Boyetts have started Christ's Community Study Center which is central to all their work.
