CHERY FLORES #012377

Chery's love for Spain, its people, and language was born out of her relationship with her paternal grandfather, a Spanish native, who was her first Spanish teacher. Throughout her life, this love has continued to grow and has translated to a call to serve as a long-term missionary to Spain.

During a stay in Spain, Chery discovered that while most Spaniards are Catholic, few actually practice their faith. Roman Catholicism dominates the spiritual landscape, and most Spaniards believe they must work their way to heaven. Unfortunately, this approach to faith has produced a spiritually poor culture in which people tend toward superstition. A simple, quiet question resonating from her heart—"Lord, would you use me to bring the hope of Christ and the gospel to Spain?"—was the first step in Chery's journey to the mission field.

Chery is joining a new church-planting team focused on reaching the young, emerging postmodern generation of Madrid. She will also help establish EuroScope, a new training program that exposes young Americans to a variety of European cultural experiences and challenges them to consider missionary service as a viable career option.
